

ABSTRACT

A customer registers vital signs and answers to medical examination by an interview respectively from a home health care terminal in a vital information database. A medical institution and a health service supplier prepare a comment, referring to the vital information database via a health care data reference viewer, register it in an information provision database and also register ready-made contents in a health related information database in case the ready-made contents are utilized for advice information. The customer refers to a comment and advice in the information provision database via the home health care terminal. A specific individual refers a health condition of his/her parents and others who remotely live via a specific individual terminal. A provider calculates storage expenses using a health care database server and charges the medical institution and the health service supplier the expenses.
